Weather helps control fires

ved weather helped fire crews defeat sever and brush fires across the West on in homes and campgrounds.

fighter was killed by a falling tree in Caliscenic Big Sur country, and in Colorado, ologists accompanied fire crews to prevent
to artifacts near Indian cliff dwellings.

11,540 firefighters were on the lines,
500 more than Sunday, said Ann Finkel-the federal Interagency Fire Center at lao.

ire teams and helicopters were sent from where weekend rain knocked down four freeing up personnel and supplies.

stein said that as of mid-Monday, 44 fires burned uncontrolled, covering about 167,000 acres, an increase of about 50,000 acres from Sunday.

After a week of temperatures in the 90s or higher over much of the West, lower temperatures, lighter wind and rain gave firefighters a break in parts of Wyoming, Arizona and New Mexico.

But firefighters still had to contend with dry air and wind in Utah, Idaho, Nebraska, Colorado and California. Southwestern Texas also had no rain, but higher humidity helped slow a 150-acre fire in Big Bend National Park.

Some 200 evacuees were not allowed to return to their homes and an unknown number of people were evacuated Monday in the path of a 1,760-acre fire near Sugarloaf Mountain west of Denver that destroyed at least 49 homes and other structures in Boulder Canyon on Sunday.

The fire still was spreading Monday but containment was expected soon, said sheriff's spokeswoman Sharon Digiocomo.

Colorado firefighters facing humidity as low as 10 percent had to cope with more than two dozen forest fires covering several thousand acres of rain-starved timber and brush in the central and western parts of the state.

Mesa Verde National Park in southwestern Colorado, the site of Anasazi Indian cliff dwellings, was closed while six archaeologists traveled with fire crews to help save artifacts from a fire that had burned 2,350 acres.

The fires did not threaten the cliff dwellings,
which are in the canyons.

The archaeologists were along as advisers to ensure that no archaeological sites in fire areas atop the mesa were disturbed by the digging of fire breaks.

The Rattlesnake fire 15 miles northeast of Green River was also started by lightning. Plumb said the 60-acre fire in heavy Douglas fir is inaccessible to firefighters. Because firefighting resources are extremely scarce due to the large number of fires, the Rattlesnake fire is left to burn, said Plumb.

The Diamond Fork Canyon area of the Uinta National Forest had five lightning-caused fires over the weekend. The fires burned a total of 130 acres of heavy brush, mostly mountain mahogany and cedar trees, said Loyal Clark, information officer for the Uinta National Forest.

The largest of the fires in Diamond Fork Canyon was the Fifth Water fire, which burned 100 acres before being controlled at 6 p.m. Monday, said Clark. The two 20-person crews who fought the blaze will leave the area Tuesday morning. One crew was an official wildlife management crew from Boise, Idaho, and the other was an all Indian crew from the Federal Bureau of Indian Affairs in Nevada, said Clark. Some rain has helped with the mop-up on the three fires in the area, said Merly Young, spokeswoman for the Ashley National Forest headquarters in Vernal.

The Six Mile Canyon fire was controlled on Sunday after 1,950 acres burned. The Rough Canyon (2,450 acres) and Uinta Canyon (5,480 acres) fires are expected to be controlled today, said Young.

Kinard said that by mid-January LDEF will be at about 167 miles, where it will begin to tumble out of control and break up.

The spacecraft carries 57 experiments intended to determine how a wide range of materials are affected by constant bombardment from micrometeoroids, radiation, man-made space debris and other items in space.

There also are 13 million tomato seeds aboard, which are to be distributed to students around the country who are to plant them in tests for growing food on long space voyages.

Heat causes small crop yield

By JILL C. KAU

Fruit and vegetable production in Utah may not be great this year because of the hot and dry weather,
said a horticulturist with Utah State University.

"It's not so much the heat but the dryness that affects the plants. It takes the water out of the vegetables," said Brent Gledhill.

The plants will not be significantly affected if they have sufficient moisture, he said.

Thomas Hinkley, a BYU associate professor of geography, said "the principal problem is the high rate of evaporation. We are running at 150 degrees higher than normal (for evaporation)."

Verl Cook, owner of a local farm and greenhouse, said the dry climate makes the plants bloom quicker and speeds up the production process.

To prevent dryness, Cook said water should be kept on the soil by watering every week until the soil is moist about 2 inches deep.

"This summer we're going to be very irrigation dependent," Hinkley said. "We are in the thunderstorm part of the year and the thunderstorms do give precipitation, but they are very localized and unpredictable."

Sharon Pearson, a local gardener, said, "Lately, we water every second to third day and put mulch (grass clippings) down to keep the soil as moist as we can."

Cook said, "People have to utilize water efficiently by giving a deep watering in the morning."

Gledhill said that small home gardens need special attention. He also said the plants most affected by the hot, dry climate are cauliflower and broccoli because they are cold weather crops.

"These plants go to seed earlier

A key element is a $100 million U.S.

fund — provided Congress approves —

to support the Polish private sector

as the Soviet bloc country moves away from its Marxist economy.

But the dimensions of the U.S. offer could fall short of Lech Walesa's aspirations. The leader of the Solidarity trade union movement is expected to ask Bush on Tuesday when they meet in Gdansk to back a $10 billion program of international help for Poland.

Even so, a clearly exhilarated Bush assured the Polish parliament that Western democracies will stand by the Polish people.

As for the offer of financial assistance, Bush:

• Pledged to ask Congress for a

$100 million "enterprise fund" to support Polish entrepreneurs. Moreover, he said he will ask other industrialized democracies to undertake similar initiatives at this weekend's western economic summit meeting in Paris.

• Said he would also ask Congress to approve $15 million to fight air and water pollution in Krakow.

• Promised to open a U.S. educational and cultural center in Warsaw.

Poland, he added, should do the same in the United States.

• Told the parliament he would

Communist Party announces crackdown

BEIJING — China's Communist Party sought to restore its tainted image Monday by publicizing a nationwide crackdown on corruption in its ranks — one of the demands of the student movement crushed by the government.

New party General Secretary Jiang Zemin also met delegations from Romania and Ethiopia in a show of diplomacy despite icy relations with Western governments protesting China's bloody suppression of unarmed demonstrators.

Every major daily newspaper carried articles Monday on the expulsion and other punishment of party members caught embezzling, profiteering and abusing their power.

An end to official corruption was one of the calls of student-led demonstrators. They also demanded freedom of the press and a dialogue with government officials.

The government, which ordered troops into Beijing on June 3-4 to crush the student movement, now has seized the corruption issue as its own.

The People's Daily, official mouthpiece of the 47.7 million-member party and the world's biggest political organization, said 452 officials in the southern province of Guizhou were expelled for corruption in the first half of 1989.

Yet, Monday's editions of the Paris newspaper, Le Monde, quoted a Chinese dissident saying, "The cruelty of Deng Xiaoping goes way beyond that of Mao (Tse-tung) and Chiang Kai-shek."

France celebrates Bastille bicentennial

PARIS — France is readying a display of sparkle, power, culture and whimsy for this week's climax of the French Revolution bicentennial.

The focus will be on an assembly of nearly 30 world leaders, on spectacular parades and fireworks and on the inauguration of a new Opera house at the Place de la Bastille, where a mob stormed the hated Bastille prison on July 14, 1789, to launch the revolution.

Among the chiefs of state on hand will be President Bush, there for the annual economic summit of the world's seven largest industrial democracies. By chance, this year is France's turn to be host.

The result, depending on the point of view, is expected to be the City of Light at its most enchanting — or a security-imposed gridlock on a scale the developed world has never seen.

It will either be a fitting tribute to one of the founding events of the modern age, or an exercise in self-congratulation that ignores both the cruel and brutal side of the Revolution and the plight of today's poor and oppressed.

Plans for nuclear waste meet opposition

OGDEN — While Utah officials expressed confidence Monday in the federal government's safety measures for movement of radioactive nuclear waste through the state, several residents argued the plan is too risky.

In a statement read at a public hearing on the Department of Energy's yet-to-be-opened Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad, N.M., Gov. Norm Bangerter said "much has been done ... to protect the public" when waste is shipped from Idaho and Washington state through northern Utah to New Mexico.

The transportation issue is one of many the Department of Energy has encountered in its efforts to open the waste plant. Monday's hearing was the ninth and last scheduled on the draft supplement to the environmental impact statement for the repository.

"It's imperative that the health and safety of all Utahns be protected during the shipment of wastes through this site," said the governor's statement read by Larry Anderson, state director of the Bureau of Radiation Control.

Anderson said the state's own response plan in the event of an accident is "strong," with 250 trained personnel standing by.

Delta sets new boarding record: 400,000

SALT LAKE CITY — Delta Air Lines set a new boarding record in June at its Salt Lake hub, topping the 400,000 mark for the first time.

Fred Rollins, district director-marketing, said 416,034 passengers boarded Delta flights at Salt Lake International Airport during the month, a 6 percent increase over the old record of 391,897, set in August 1988.

Rollins said Delta's growth at Salt Lake City reflects not only record travel locally, but also record numbers of passengers visiting Utah.

He said Delta's expanding international route system, servicing more than 160 cities worldwide, gives Salt Lake City passengers "global convenience."

"At the same time, Delta's marketing efforts around the world highlighting our Salt Lake City hub and Utah bring increasing numbers of passengers to our state," he said.

The airline now offers nonstop service from Salt Lake City to six airports in Southern California — Los Angeles, Long Beach, Burbank, Ontario, Orange County and San Diego.

Salt Lake man sentenced for wife's death

SALT LAKE CITY — A West Valley City man who was convicted of second-degree murder in the 1987 shooting death of his wife has been sentenced to five years to life in prison.

John J. Quas, 38, was found guilty last month by a 3rd District Court in the death of Susan Quas, 36, who died of a gunshot wound to the head in June 1987.

Third District Judge Kenneth Rigrup on Monday granted a prosecution request that Quas should be given the five-to-life term on the homicide conviction and zero to five years for a firearm enhancement. Rigrup said Quas would be required to serve at least one year of the enhancement charge and would serve a minimum of six years altogether.

Quas maintained during trial that his intoxicated wife shot herself with a .44-caliber handgun while he was in the shower. He was charged in the death a short time later, but a circuit judge dismissed the charge, saying the evidence pointed as much to suicide as to homicide. He was recharged after prosecutors said they acquired new evidence.

Cook said tomatoes are fair weather plants and don't do well unless the days are below 90 degrees and the nights are above 50 degrees.

Pearson said, "At this point, there are fewer tomatoes on the plants than there were last year."

The hot, dry winds can have an effect on the leaves and on tomatoes and

Park City hosts bicycle championships

By RON BOHANNON
University Sports Writer

The United States Cycling Federation (USCF) will hold the national road racing championships at Park City with more than 800 of the nation's top amateur cyclists competing during July 12-20.

"Eight-hundred and fifty-six cyclists have registered, making it the largest national championship ever. Even bigger than the Olympic time trials," said USCF representative Diana Fritschner.

"All of last year's champions, except six women who are in Europe competing in the Tour de France, will be defending their championships."

The U.S. ski team is organizing this event, said Thomas Kelly, communications director for the team.

The road race and the criterium events will start and finish at the ski resorts. The Park City organizing committee expects more than 10,000 people to attend this weekend. The public is invited and there is no admission charge to watch the races.

The national finals will include four races; the road race, the criterium, and the individual and team time trials.

The criterium event will be this Saturday. "This is the best spectator sport in cycling," said Kelley. "It is a multi-lapped race on a course less than a mile long beginning and ending at the base of Park City's ski resort." Subaru of America is sponsoring Saturday's race. It is also going to be televised by Turner Broadcasting Network as part of the "Going for the Gold" series to be aired this fall.

John Tomac won the criterium race last year and will be returning this year.

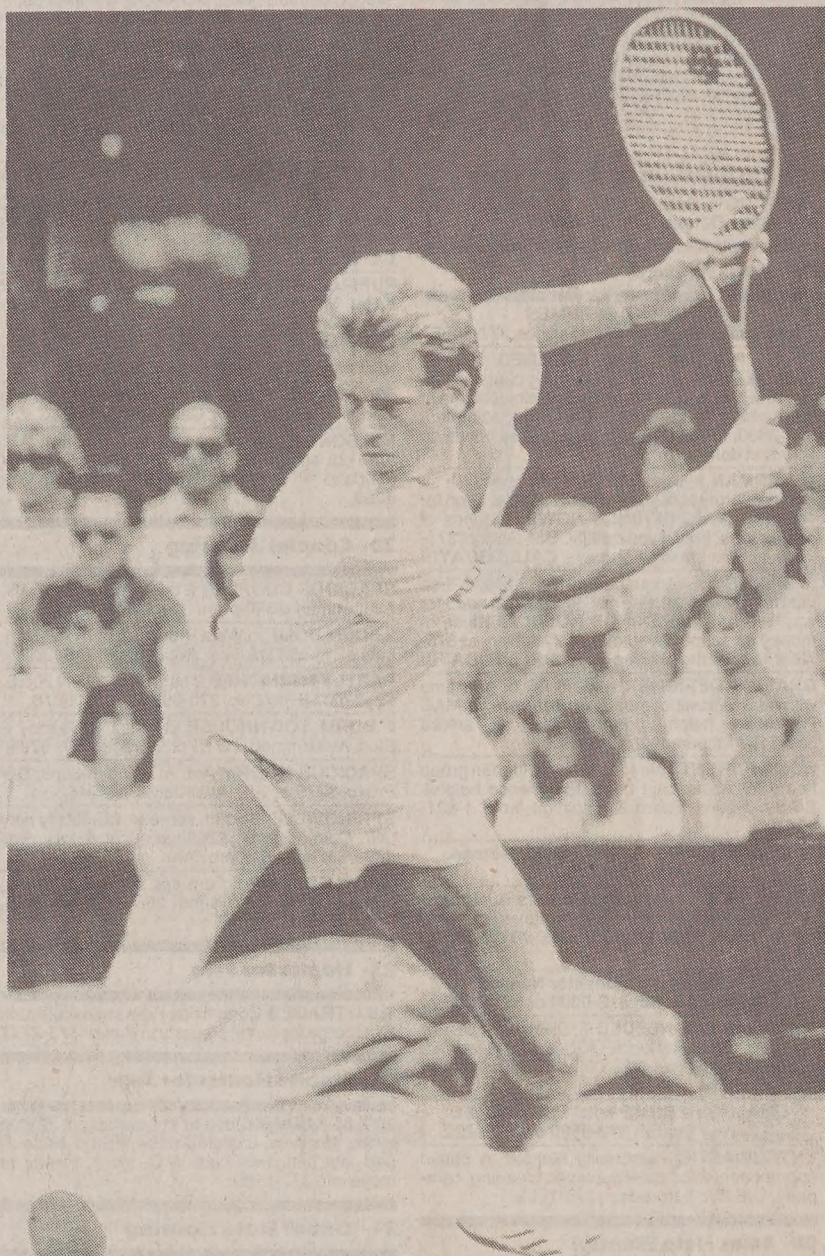

The road race on July 18 and 20 will be in Deer Valley on the Solamere loop. The course is a road that winds up through the aspen covered hills past condominiums to the Deer Valley ski resort center. The loop is 3.3 miles of hair-pin turns at 8,000 feet altitude with grades that approach 15 percent. The women will race 15 laps consisting of more than 50 miles and the men will race 30 laps, a little more than 100 miles.

The individual and team time trials at Park City will be on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday.

Fritschner compared the environmental conditions in Park City to the May Tour de Trump held in the Catskills of New York at 3,000 feet altitude.

"It's rare to see riders walk up the road but only 25 of 190 starters finished the race," she said. "The altitude at Park City is more than 6,000 feet. It should be interesting."

Swedish tennis star Stefan Edberg returns a serve during one of his six match victories at the Wimbledon All-England Tennis Championships. Boris Becker defeated Edberg in the men's final.

West Germans sweep Wimbledon tournament

By DOUG GIBSON
Sports Editor

An all-West German single's championship was accomplished at Wimbledon when Steffi Graf outlasted Martina Navratilova 6-2, 6-7(1-7), 6-1 to take the women's title and Boris Becker whipped Sweden's Stefan Edberg in straight sets 6-0, 7-6(7-1), 6-4 for the men's crown.

Navratilova, tied with Helen Wills Moody for the most Wimbledon championships (eight), failed in her second attempt to win a ninth crown (last year Graf beat her 5-7, 6-2, 6-1) but was the only one of Graf's Wimbledon competitors to take a set from the world's top player.

The 20-year-old Graf steamrolled the 32-year-old American the first set but was overwhelmed by Navratilova's volleys the second set and quickly fell behind 5-2. Yet Graf rebounded to force the set to a tiebreaker that Navratilova dominated.

There was to be no upset as Graf broke Navratilova's second and third service games of the third set and missed only four first serves of her own to completely dominate the set 6-1.

Becker, who won Wimbledon in 1985 and 1986, surprised a sluggish Edberg with three quick breaks and became the third Wimbledon player to take a championship set 6-0. Edberg, who defeated Becker in 1988 for the Wimbledon crown, rallied in the second set, breaking Becker to lead 6-5, and enjoyed triple set point at 40-love in the 12th game.

Becker then won five straight points, breaking Edberg's serve and the dispirited Swede in the tiebreaker to take a two sets to none lead.

The big serving Becker broke Edberg in the third set and cruised to a 6-4 third set victory and the championship.

In another Wimbledon final the duo of John Fitzgerald of Australia and Anders Jarryd of Sweden upset the top ranked team of Americans Rick Leach and Jim Pugh 3-6, 7-6, 6-4, 7-6 to win the men's doubles title.

When Brushing becomes a tender experience we can help.

HAROLD L. MILLER, JR.

BYU Professor of Psychology and Associate Dean of Honors and General Education

"Doing Differently"

Professor Miller submits that learning is motivated by surprise and is subject to constraints. Such constraints may be characteristic of a species, a group, or an individual. The experimental analysis of learning in humans and animals suggests certain patterns or regularities in those constraints. One form of constraint involves stages in the development of the learner. According to this view, learning follows a sequence; it takes on certain forms or styles, often as a function of the learner's age or circumstance. Failure to satisfy the sequence may result in disability, even pathology.

Professor Miller will examine the concept of constrained learning and will outline a stage-model of intellectual and moral development in the undergraduate years. He will also explore the model's implications for larger issues: What is the end of undergraduate education? Must the true believer be anti-intellectual? What does it mean to be "ever arriving" where the truth is concerned?

County dedicates memorial

Nelson attends Provo service for war veteran monument

STEPHEN MOFFITT
University Staff Writer

ah County dedicated its new memorial on Friday.

The memorial, made of black granite, contains the names of all servicemen from Utah County who died in World Wars I and II, and the Korean and Vietnam Wars.

The memorial also contains the names of all the missing servicemen from Utah.

The memorial looks like the Vietnam Memorial in Washington D.C., stands approximately three feet tall and contains the names of 29 in War I, 127 World War II, five Korean and 40 Vietnam War servicemen who were killed.

In his opening remarks, County Commissioner Brent Morris said, "The memorial is a symbol of sacrifice that those of Utah County have made. It has been a long and tedious task to gather all the names of the dead of Utah County."

Howard C. Nielson, R-

o, who also attended the ceremonies, said, "This memorial is just beautiful as any in Washington D.C."

World War II we all wanted to part of the war. We did not forget our men in Vietnam and Korea the way we should have had. Let's make their service harder," Nielson.

General Robert Oaks, a commander of training at Randolph Air

Base, in San Antonio, Texas, attended BYU for one year before entering the first class of the Air Force Academy, said, "It is fit-

that a community like Utah should dedicate a monument to the dead."

Brad Ohlson and Kent Richard put the finishing touches on Utah County's memorial that honors those killed in action.

"Many of these men whose names are on the plaque have a spectacular war story to tell, only their story does not have a happy ending."

Cathlene Caras, whose husband was shot down over North Vietnam in 1967 and was listed as missing in action until his body was returned to the United States in 1988, said, "I know the feeling of having loved ones missing in action."

"You cry as you take table scraps to the cats and wonder if he is dying for some morsel of food. I truly respect those who suffer the tragedy and turmoil of war."

The memorial's dedicatory prayer called those present to reflect upon the sacrifice made by those who died in the wars.

"May this memorial remind us of the supreme sacrifice that these men have made. May the black remind us of the darkness and horror of war and the white remind us of the hope, vision and bravery of these men," according to the dedicatory prayer.

New members named to task force committee on improved election law

By MELISSA DREW
University Staff Writer

Lt. Gov. Val Oveson has reassembled Utah's Task Force on Election Law in an effort to improve the laws governing political action committees, according to the Associated Press.

Regulations of the Political Issues Committee will examine whether there should be regulation and control, said David Bird, a member of the task force.

The financial dealings of the PIC and the initiative and referendum processes of the state will also be examined, said the Associated Press.

Twelve people have been named to this new task force.

Included are Rep. Blaze Wharton, D-Salt Lake City; David Bird, a Salt Lake City lawyer and lobbyist; Nelda Bishop, a Bountiful lawyer representing Utah Common Cause; Stuart Hinckley, a Salt Lake City lawyer; Dan Jones, a Salt Lake City pollster; Ed Mayne, president of the Utah AFL-CIO; Raylene Ireland, a former Utah County Republican Party chairwoman; Richard Greene, Weber County Clerk; Lloyd Selleneit, a former Bountiful legislator who will represent the Utah Tax Limitation Coalition; Vernon Carr, a Bountiful printer and ballot-law expert; State Sen. Kay Cornaby; and Terri McCullough, Co-director of the League of Women Voters.

"Oveson assembled a similar task force in 1985 that was concerned with election procedures," said Dave Hanson, Utah Deputy Lt. Gov.

After the 1988 election, Oveson decided to reconvene this task force that would evaluate three major areas.

The first area concerns the Political Action Committee bill.

This would decide which PACs should be required to register and report their incomes and expenditures, said Hanson.

"Utah and Arkansas were the only two states that did not have some form of PAC monitoring in 1988," said Hanson.

The second area to be evaluated is the regulation of the organizations set up to pass or defeat ballot questions, which is one of the roles of the PIC, Hanson said.

Hanson said the final area to be discussed is the whole initiative process in general. "The whole process will be looked at and checked."

Some questions that will be addressed are 'what is an expenditure,' 'what determines a candidate,' 'when does a candidate become a candidate,' and 'what kinds of contributions need to be reported,' said Hanson.

According to the Associated Press, Oveson said, "I still feel very strongly that our state needs a political issue committee registration and reporting law to require reporting of contributions made in initiative or referendum contests."

Low per capita income Report may be misleading

By HEIDE M. THATCHER
University Staff Writer

A report released last April by the U.S. Department of Commerce that ranked Utah as having the third lowest per capita income in the U.S. is misleading, according to the Utah Foundation, a non profit research organization.

"People have this perception that per capita income shows the relative economic well being of a state," said Allan J. Witt, a Utah Foundation official.

Witt said the emphasis placed on Utah's low per capita income in the Department of Commerce tended to hurt the economic development of Utah.

He said that per capita income is not an accurate measure of economic well being for the state of Utah because per capita income figures are found by taking the total personal income divided by the total population.

"We have more children in our population, and they (the U.S. Department of Commerce) are dividing income by children who don't provide any of the income," Witt said.

A more accurate way to measure economic well being, said Witt, would be to take the total personal income and divide it by households.

"When measured by households, Utah is only 2 percent below the Mountain States, and only 12 percent below the United States," he said.

He also said Utah has one of the best educated work forces in the nation, and "while Utah may not have great wealth, we don't have great poverty either."

Witt said Utah has a small percentage of its population on welfare rolls.

Another reason Utah has a low per capita income rating, said Witt, is that for the past 25 to 30 years Utah's birth rate has been increasing while the National birth rate has been declining.

Witt said the low National birth rate has created labor shortages elsewhere.

Court delays lengthen lifeHi-Fi killer's execution date shaky

By LEEANN LAMBERT
Senior Reporter

The scheduled Aug. 22 execution of convicted Hi-Fi killer William Andrews will depend on how quickly the state and the federal courts move through the appeals process, said the prosecuting attorney for the case.

"There are two possible tracks that the courts could take: A fast track or a slow track," said Robert Wallace, the private attorney contracted by the state to handle the case.

"If the courts take the slow track, it could take a year and a half or two years for the latest appeal to go through the process. If they take the faster track, he (Andrews) could be through the process before the August execution date."

Defense attorney, Tim Ford, said Andrews' constitutional rights had been violated at his trial and by his 14-year stay on death row at the Utah State Penitentiary.

Ford said Andrews is paying more for his sentence than did Dale Peirre Selby, the other convicted Hi-Fi murderer who was executed in August 1987. Selby was convicted in 1974 along with Andrews for the torture murders of three people during a robbery at Ogden's Hi-Fi Shop.

Andrews didn't shoot the victims, and he had left the store before Selby shot them, said Ford.

The latest appeal is based on the contention that the jury should have convicted Andrews of a lesser crime, he said.

However, Wallace said until Ford actually petitions for another Andrews appeal, the possibility of a stay of execution is uncertain.

"Andrews has already been through at least 16 different stages of the appeals process," said Wallace. He has been a resident of death row at the Point of the Mountain longer than anyone else.

The U.S. Supreme Court has already rejected three of Andrews' appeals, he said.

Both the U.S. Supreme Court and the Utah Supreme Court are working on ways to cut down the time the appeals process traditionally has taken and to eliminate court case backlogs.

The U.S. Supreme Court is trying to streamline the appeals process by asking the different courts involved to coordinate their efforts, said Wallace.

In one appeals case, judges from a circuit court came to a district court on the day the district court was hearing an appeals case, said Wallace.

When the defense attorney said he wanted to appeal the case to the district court, the circuit court judges were brought into the district courtroom and the case was settled by both courts on the same day.

The Utah Supreme Court created the Utah Court of Appeals in 1987 to help alleviate court case delays, said Chief Justice Gordon R. Hall in an Associated Press article Monday.

"The Court of Appeals has functioned very smoothly and the judges have worked very hard," Hall said in the AP article. "The progress of the (Utah) Supreme Court is due both to the efforts of the (Utah) Supreme Court justices to dispose of new filings and the existing cases under advisement, and the ability of the Court of Appeals to dispose of new appeals and the 816 cases transferred from the (Utah) Supreme Court."
